I then told my assistant to look into the passage to the right or East while I looked into the one leading to the left. I went about 30 feet through a narrow room and found a lead going nearly straight down. I went down this hole for about 20 feet and then found another one leading [illegible]st. This one soon got so small [illegible] I was obliged to crawl in it but after a hard tug for about 30 or 40 feet I got into a neat little room of about 25 feet in diameter. I had some beautiful ornaments of lattice & bracket work and also a very smooth floor. As I was getting nearly out of hearing of the guard I started back, and arrived at the station in about half the time that it took me to get away from it. I soon found that my assistant was stuck so I hurried to him to see what was the matter. When I had gone about 50 feet I came across him unexpectedly. He was perplexed because he had found a hole leading downward that he was afraid to go into. I began to climb down and soon found that the passage was not as bad as it looked. The hole went straight down at first but soon became sloping and
